Nursing Shortage Papers

Nursing school enrollment is not growing fast enough to meet the projected demand for RN and APRN services. Though AACN reported a 3.7% enrollment increase in entry-level baccalaureate programs in nursing in 2018, this increase is not sufficient to meet the projected demand for nursing services, including the need for more nurse faculty, researchers, and primary care providers.

Nursing Shortage

The alarm about the current nursing shortage has been sounding for more than a year, and continues to get louder and more urgent. In an industry that considers a 10 percent national vacancy rate to be a severe shortage, the current US national average for vacant registered nurse (RN) positions stands at 11 percent.
